To assess the efficacy and safety of different treatment options for erectile dysfunction (ED) in patients with arterial hypertension (AH) and diabetes mellitus (DM). Sixty-eight patients (48 men and 20 women) with AH and DM were examined. The patients underwent clinical examination, assessment of arterial blood pressure, and blood and urine tests. According to the data obtained, the patients were treated with drugs that could be used in ED (peginterferon alfa, pentoxifylline, nifedipine, diltiazem, isosorbide dinitrate) or combinations of the drugs. Thirty-three patients had ED, 4 patients had intermittent ED, and the remaining 31 patients had no ED. Among patients with ED, 22 received a drug combination (in 82157476af
